PROCESS

There are two primary natural solvents in this world: water and alcohol. The plants' active compounds are usually either water-soluble or alcohol-soluble.

The best full spectrum extraction method is to extract plants using both water and alcohol. That is how Dragon Drops are made. Our Dragon Drops go through two rounds of water extraction and 1 round of alcohol extraction. For every ounce of Dragon Drops, 24 ounces of solvents are used: a 24:1 solvents to finished product ratio to avoid reaching saturation point. More solvents mean more active constituents coming out and a more complete extraction. The extracted materials from all three rounds (water and alcohol) are then combined and condensed by removing the majority of the solvents, reducing the volume by 95%. Essential oils evaporated during the extraction are captured in oil traps and added back to the final extracts. What you receive in our tinctures are therefore the essence of the essence. It has the best of both worlds: all the water-soluble compounds AND alcohol-soluble compounds.

Most tinctures on the market are not true extracts. They are actually just solvents infused with herbs. They do not go through an actual extraction and condensation process because the alcohol extraction and condensation equipment is very expensive; the facility has to be rigorously permitted by the government and the production process needs to be carefully controlled due to the combustibility of alcohol.

As a result, most companies do not use heat in their tincture production so they do not have to invest in high tech equipment upfront and they can keep the ongoing operating costs low. In their low tech procedure, dry herbs are soaked in 20-90% alcohol then the infused solvent is sold. That is it. No heat, no condensing. What goes into the infusion tank is what comes out. A 1:1 solvents to finished product ratio. This means the saturation point is easily reached and much of the active constituents is left behind. The entire process can be summarized as "Soak-Stir-Sell". The end products of "Soak-Stir-Sell" in tincture form are, in reality, solvents infused with herbs. Infusions are NOT extracts. They are thin, often light colored and very weak.

Dragon Herbs produces its tinctures in a pharmaceutical factory. The factory is licensed to produce human injections, which has the strictest standards in pharmaceutical production. This means our tincture production, though not pharmaceutical, can benefit from the state-of-the-art facility and equipment and the best-in-class manufacturing practices that are already in place to meet the highest GMP standards.

Above: Condensation tanks remove as much as 95% of solvents (water and alcohol) used during the extraction stage. This is a critical stage to ensure the finished product is as strong as possible.

Middle: Water used to produce Dragon Drops is purified to high quality drinking water standards. Our computer controlled water filtration system involves 4 stages of filtration and multiple filtration mediums. Our filtration system is capable of outputting injection grade water.

Bottom: 4 Stage Water Filtration And Purification System

It has been a major goal of Dragon Herbs for the many years to make our Dragon Drops affordable by all. We are happy to announce that we are finally there. Most of our Dragon Drops cost less than $10 per fluid ounce.

How do we do it? Economy of Scale. Dragon Herbs produces its tinctures in a pharmaceutical factory. We produce in large volume to maximize our raw material buying power and to achieve industrial scale production efficiency. We then pass the savings onto our end users.

Yes, Marie Kondo, our labels spark joy!

Our Dragon Drops labels are inspired by artisan wine labels. Each label tells the unique story of a Dragon Drops: where they come from, what they are made of, why they are here and what they can do for you. If you examine them under the light, different angles reveal new layers and new details that are otherwise not visible or obvious, adding depth and intrigue to each Dragon Drops' story. Look closely and you will be inspired by the beauty and magic of the botanical kingdom.

Keep them out on the counter to encourage compliance. Compliance is the first rule of tonic herbalism: If you don't take the herbs, they don't work.

Red Reishi Mushroom (Ganoderma lucidum) is recognized as one of the most important and beneficial tonic herbs in the world. Red Reishi has been the most revered herb in Asia since pre-historic times. Sages and emperors sought this herb to confer health, well-being, good fortune and wisdom. Wild Red Reishi is very rare in the commercial market because it is not possible to collect very large amounts of it. It is special because it is totally natural. In the wild, it is a superb collector of Qi and Shen energy. It is called the “Herb of Spiritual Potency.” We are fortunate to have a limited but steady supply of truly wild Reishi mushroom. These mushrooms are not planted or wildcrafted by humans. They grow where they will, where they are perfectly suited. The growing environment is extremely harsh (Manchurian alpine). As a result, they develop great power. Dragon Herbs Wild Red Reishi Drops is made from pure wild Red Reishi Mushroom fruiting bodies only — we do not mix species in this product.

- Classically called the “Mushroom of the Immortals”
- Used as a tonic for centuries by Taoist and Zen seekers and masters, emperors and empresses
